POLICE MAKE CLEANUP AT 5-POINTS

A cleanup of the vagrants who were found hanging around the pool halls of Five Points was made by Chief of Police Collins and a posse of police officers Tuesday night. The raid resulted in the arrest of 18 vagrants who were found to be without a visible means of support. All those arrested gave their occupations as laborers. They were:

R. Garcia, 25; S. R. Montas, 30; Robt. Sheff, 22; A. Lopez, 36; Sam Saloman, 26; Albert Costelli, 28; Miguel Flores, 25; E. Cunha, 31; Juan Torres, 32; F. Delgado, 24; Pete Lajan, 24; Joe Alonzo, 28; Isaac Sanchez, 31; Poe Pinera, 26; R. Quiroaz, 30; Feliz Trajo, 33; Joe Garcia, 27; Espedilion Moreno, 27; and Alvye Reynolds, 29.

The eighteen were taken before Justice of the Peace Ray Griffin Wednesday, sitting for City Recorder Albert Mansfield. Griffin sent four of the men: Cunha, Lopez, Feliz and Trajo out on suspended sentences and ordered them to go to work. The other fourteen were given two hours to get out of the county, and told not to return.

Flood Will Case Resume Hearing

Mrs. Eudore Helen Stearns Willette was in the courthouse bright and early Tuesday morning looking much better than she did when she left in a huff last week when she failed to respond to a question put to her by Garrett McEnerney, the doughty warrior of the Flood staff of counsel. Mrs. Willett was quite docile and readily answered questions concerning dates and events of thirty years ago. She has a splendid memory for one of her age. McEnerney asked many questions that were objected to by Alexander O'Grady, counsel for Mrs. J. P. Gavin, the disputed daughter of the late James L. Flood.

When Attorney Garret McEnerney questioned her as to the validity of the signature, "Eudore Lorde E. Stearn," signed to the famous document setting forth that she abandoned all rights to the minor child, now known as Mrs. Gavin. Mrs. Willette said the signature was hers, but that she had never seen the document before, nor had she ever signed any document in the presence of a notary.

Concerning the transaction in which she was paid $5000, she said the check was given to her by Colonel Kowalski, late attorney, who had become interested in her position through S. H. Friedlander, at that time manager of the Columbia Theater. She first talked with Kowalski in the Baldwin Hotel.

Subsequent conferences, two of them, were in his offices, where she signed for the check. She said Kowalski, her mother and herself went to the Union Trust Company, where the check was deposited and $3800 of the $5000 credited to her account. Kowalski, she said, retained $1200. Questioning caused her to remark that a week or so later, he summoned her to his office on the pretense of important information and tried to borrow her $3800.

The case at the close of the hearing on Tuesday afternoon went over to July 12.

Peace Students Talk Before Kiwanis Club

An interesting program was given before the Redwood City Kiwanis club on Wednesday by Francis Balaz, a Hungarian student at Oxford university and John Davies, who was born and raised in the mountains of China of American parents. The two young men gave interesting talks on their respective countries and emphasized the need of better understanding between nations. Balaz sang a number of folk songs in English and in his own language.

Harry Groom, who was one of the delegates to the Kiwanis International convention in Memphis, Tenn., last month, gave an interesting report on the convention. Several matters of interest to the club were also discussed.

Elmore B. Hinman treated the members of the club to a drink of Silver Spray, a new beverage which has just been placed upon the market.

The chairman of the meeting was Willis Ayre, one of the proprietors of the Redwood City Hardware Company.

TWO DAYS LEFT FOR VETERANS' INSURANCE

Only two days remain in which veterans can reinstate their war-time insurance. Insurance must be applied for before milnight Saturday. This is the message that Adjutant Tom Vernall of the Redwood City Post is trying to take to all veterans in this district. July 2 at milnight is the last chance for government insurance. fter that date it will be too late.

CITY BRIEFS

D. S. Berry, an income tax agent from the office of Internal Revenue Collector J. P. McLaughlin, has been here all week checking up on local income taxpayers.

Miss Dora Bertolucci and her sister, Olga, the two daughter of A. Bertolucci of this city, have gone to Watsonville to spend their vacation.

Mrs. Harry Potts and family are enjoying a vacation at their summer home in Capitola.

Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Downs are spending a vacation in the southern part of the state visiting relatives.

Angelo Nencetti of Montara, San Mateo county, was a frequent visitor to Redwood City this week. The object of his visits being to consult with his attorney, C. L. Hubbell, who is putting him through bankruptcy. Nencetti was Hubbell's first client in his new law office at 395 Stafford building.

Mrs. Hubbell spent Wednesday and Thursday in San Francisco in the interests of her adjustment bureau, returning to Redwood City Friday morning.

Mrs. Duncan Reynard entertained about twenty of her friends at a bridge party last Saturday afternoon at her home on Hopkins venue, given in honor of her sister, Miss Rosalie Smith, whose birthday anniversary was on that day.

Mrs. Hubbell entertained at dinner last Sunday the Messrs. Wagner of the Harr Wagner Publishing Co. and Tapson of the Roberts Manufacturing Co. Mr. Wagner is well-known here in Redwood City and has a daughter residing in Woodside Acres.

The Misses Billy May and Ivy Hubbell had as week-end guests Marjorie and Kay Moye of San Francisco. The little visitors were delighted with Redwood City and voted that Daddy would have to buy a home here.

Peace Meeting Is Held At The M. E. Church

John Davies and Francis Balaz, two students who are touring the country as one of a score of peace caravans sent throughout the nation by the Friends church, spoke before a meeting in the Methodist church on Wednesday evening. The two young men, one a Hungarian and the other born and raised in China, spoke in the interest of international understanding and brotherhood. They had addressed members of the Kiwanis club earlier in the day in interest of the same movement.

Rev. A. H. Clark presided at the meeting and introduced the two visitors. The first to speak was Balaz, who explained the Youth Movement in Europe, and told of the aims of the movement. He also entertained the audience with a number of folk songs of various countries, including several in his own language, the Magyar.

Davies spoke on the relation of the church to world peace. He placed the responsibility for war upon professing Christians who, although nominally accepting the teachings of Christ as the foundation of their various churches, yet violate every percept of the Galilean teacher, both in their relations between themselves and with non-Christians. He especially scored the so-called missionaries who go to foreign countries while everything is peaceful, but immediately call for armed gunboats as soon as an emergency arises. It is these, he stated, and the commercial policies of western nations which have made China, Japan and India skeptical of western civilization.

ROBBERY REPORT LEADS TO DISCOVERY OF BOOZE

San Mateo police were called to the Vendome hotel in that city Sunday night by the report of John Murphy that he had been robbed of $15. Upon arriving the officers found liquor being served, and arrested James Courtney, proprietor of the hotel. Later Murphy discovered the money he thought was lost, in his pocket. Courtney was charged with the sale of liquor.

HENRY SCOTT DIES AFTER ILLNESS

Henry T. Scott, perhaps one of the best known residents of San Mateo county, passed away at his home in Hillsborough on Monday. Scott's death followed an illness of more than a year's duration. He was 81 years of age and had been a resident of California for the past sixty years.

Scott had one of the most remarkable careers of any of the millionaires of the state. He was born on a farm in Maryland, and came to this state as a poor boy. He took a job at one dollar a day in the Union Works in San Francisco. He continued with that concern, finally becoming one of the largest stockholders of the company and its general manager.

Scott was also one of the pioneer backers of the Pacific Telephone Company and was for many years chairman of the board of directors of that company. He amassed an enormous fortune and owned a palatial home in Hillsborough. The founding of the city of Hillsborough as a millionaire colony was mainly through the efforts of Scott.

Scott is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Walter Martin, and by two sons, Harry and Preston Scott. Funeral services were held for the deceased financier on Wednesday from St. Matthew's Episcopal church in San Mateo.

Exchangites Plan Water Carnival

The success which met the water carnival staged by the Redwood City Exchange club last year will be more than duplicated if present plans are carried to a conclusion. Plans for an affair similar to that of last year were discussed by the members of the local service club at the weekly meeting last Tuesday.

Plans as at present outlined include swimming exhibitions by well-known swimmers, water sports, stunts and a barbeque. A committee has been appointed to make arrangements for the barbeque. This consists of Harry Hallett, Louis Pollard and J. H. Poole. The Palo Alto and Burlingame Exchange clubs will be asked to join with the local club in the carnival.

The speaker at the meeting Tuesday evtning was Leonard Read, secretary of the Burlingame chamber of commerce. His subject was "Aviation." Frank Griffin was chairman of the meeting.

Redwood Girl Is Married In Stanford Chapel

Miss Margaret Kirtland of this city and Albert William Gentry of Berkeley were married Wednesday evening in the Stanford Memorial church by Rev. R. B. Cherrington of Palo Alto. The wedding was attended by many friends of the two young people, including many from Redwood City.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Charles L. Huyck as matron of honor, Miss Alice Bettin as maid of honor, and by Misses Sallie and Ruth Gentry as bridesmaids. Little Shirley Fay Kirtland of San Luis Obispo was flower girl. The best man was John H. Cooper, a friend of the groom and the ushers were C. L. Huyck, Harlan Varney and William Hall. The bride was given away by her brother, Donald Kirtland. The church was colorfully decorated for the occasion.

Mrs. Gentry is the daughter of Mrs. George Hopkins and the late Rev. C. C. Kirtland of this city. She is a graduate of the San Jose teachers college and has for the past few years been teching in Bakersfield and in the Hawaiian Islands.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Gentry of Berkeley, and is a geologist employed by the Shell Oil Company. He is at present stationed at Fullerton, and the young couple will make aheir home in that city.

LARGEST SHIPMENT LEAVES CEMENT PLANT

The largest shipment ever to leave the local plant of the Pacific Portland Cement Company was sent out on Wednesday. For the first time since the plant has been in operation here two large steamers were being loaded at the plant's wharf at one time. The two ships were two of the McCormick Steamship Company's ships, the Silverado and the Edna. The two ships took on a combined cargo of 15,000 barrels of cement equal to 60,000 sacks. The ships left for points along the Pacific coast.

The cement plant, beside shipping its product out by rail, is using the local harbor almost daily for shipment by water to Pacific ports. The product of the plant here is said to be of a quality superior to the cement manufactured by other processes and finds a ready market wherever used.

Work is being rushed on the second unit of the giant plant, and according to Harold Power, manager, the second unit will be in operation soon. This will double the capacity if the plant and will also require many more workmen.

In order to meet the demand for their cement it has been found necessary by the company to add a second giant suction dredge to the plant here. The dredge "Texas" has been secured and will work with the "Golden Gate," which has heretofore supplied the plant with raw material from which the cement is made.

MISS LOUETTA MALLARD AND ALFRED BUCHMAN WED

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Dielman was the scene of a pretty wedding Wednesday morning when their niece, Miss Louetta Mallard became the bride of Alfred Buchman of Menlo Park. The wedding was performed by Rev. C. E. Oakley of Palo Alto, who is taking the place of Rev. R. J. Currie of this city.

Upon their return from a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Buchman will make their home in Menlo Park, where the latter maintains an oil and gasoline business on the highway.

The bride was attended by her former classmate, Miss Freda Barg, now of San Francisco. Rudolph Floethe of San Francisco acted as best man. A wedding breakfast at the ox Shoppe followed the ceremony at the home.

Mrs. Buchman is the niece of Mr. and Mrs. Dielman, and is very well-knon and popular here. She is a graduate of the Sequoia Union high school and of the San Jose normal school. She has been teaching in the local schools for several years.

The Payne F. Grainger ranch consisting of 240 acres, five miles from Halfmoon Bay, was sold at probate sale in the superior court yesterday. An offer of $4500 was made but this was bid up to $6500 and was finally sold to David M. Flynn of San Lrancisco for that sum. Cleve and Alfred Graingerare were the executors of the estate, and Edward Lynch the attorney. Payne F. Grainger, who died some time ago, was a pioneer resident of the coastside of the county.

SKAGGS-SAFEWAY STORES TO HOLD ANNIVERSARY

The Skaggs-Safeway Stores are holding their first anniversary celebration this week in honor of the formation of what is said to be the West's largest food concern. According to excecutives of the concern, this event is being celebrated throughout the entire organization from Canada to Mexico, and Nebraska to the Pacific Coast. Extensive merchandising preparations are said to have been made and various features are to be indulged in to mark the passing of the first year of their operations since the amalgamation of Skaggs Stores and Safeway Stores into one concern.

Commenting upon results of the merger which occurred July 1st, 1926, executives of the concern stated that these had exceeded their most optimistic hopes. It is said that in the year which has elapsed, operations have been extended to the extreme eastern border of the state of Nebraska and plans have been formulated which contemplate an early opening of the states of Kansas and New Mexico. It is claimed that the annual volume of sales has increased from approximately $60,000,000 to about $75,000,000 during the period since the merger. Executives state that approximately one hundred new retail units have been opened which brings the total of units in operation now in excess of one thousand. Many benefits, both to the public and to the firm itself, are said to have accrued from the move which resulted in this merger, and it is claimed that additional advantages will be developed as the vast organization is brought more nearly to perfect coordination.

News of this merger was first given to the general public during October of 1926 and created a great deal of interest and comment in the business world as well as among consumers who were vitally concerned with the economical distribution of foodstuffs. Executives of the organization express themselves as being immensely pleased with the things which the consolidation has made it possible for them to accomplish, and which they doubt would have been possible without it. It is claimed that the consolidation of interests, aims, and objectives, and the bringing together of the ablest minds in the two organizations has resulted in the discovery of many opportunities to effect economies in the purchase and distribution of foods, and has made it possible to eliminate many wasteful practices common to ordinary food store operation. The statement is made that this organization has also been able to develop a more highly trained personnel under the new arrangement, and that this has resulted in the public receiving a higher type of, and more satisfactory service than has heretofore been customary in grocery stores.

Apparently the results of the uniting of these two mercantile institutions have been exceedingly gratifying to their executives and to the public. As a consequence, they are making an event of the occasion of the first anniversary following the consolidation.

Liquor Raids Ars Staged By Police Officers

Seven men and two women were arrested Monday night on various charges by Redwood City police and officers under Sheriff McGovern Of those arrested six are charged with violating the Wright Act. They are M. Maguire, 29, of Woodside; A. Gemiginani, 39, of Pescedaro; Auguest Fabbro, 39; Charles Ward, 48; Jimmie Caracudas, 34; Pasquale Balio, 39.

The seventh man, Sylvester Gibson, is charged with vagrancy, and the two women, Mary Gibson, 25, and Grace Jones, 36, are alleged to have been inmates of a disorderly house.

Maguire and Gemiginani were arrested by the sheriff's posse. A quantity of liquor was seized and the men were taken to the county jail. Trials were held Tuesday afternoon and the men were fined $500 each.

Fabbro and Ward were arrested by Redwood police officers and a quantity of liquor was confiscated. Bail was set at $500. The officers continued their raid by entering a house at Five Points where the two women and Sylvester Gibson were arrested. Caracudas and Balio were arrested by Redwood police the following morning.

Trials for all seven for those arrested by the Redwood City police will be held today.

Golden State
News of Interest to All

A decrease of 2.2 per cent in factory employment in California during May, as compared with the corresponding month last year, is reported by Walter G. Mathewson, state labor commissioner. However, in the face of that there is also shown an increase of 2.4 per cent in the total volume of weekly payroll, representative of a growing average weekly pay envelope.

State Mineralogist Lloyd L. Root's announcement that he does not expect to be in the state service after the reorganization laws become effective on July 29th, has given rise to the report that Fred G. Stevenot of Carson Hill, Calaveras county, may land an executive job in the newly created state department of natural resources.

Classes started last week with the largest summer session enrollment in the history of Stanford University.

Resumption of the state's new highway construction program is threatened with another delay of eighteen months as a result of the decision of the California Truck Owners' Association to invoke the referendum against the highway fund allocation measure enacted by the last legislature. The referendum will automatically hold up until the November, 1928, election the law increasing the gasoline tax 1 cent per gallon, as the gas act is tied into the allocation measure. It is inoperative so long as the allocation law is ineffective.

Work will begin at Elk Grove, Sacramento county, soon on the rifle range, which is to be built by the state.

Two of the highest peaks in California's magnificent chain, the Sierra, now bear the names of two men who lost their lives a year ago in the most recent attempt to scale Mt. Everest in the Himalayas. Melika, 55-year-old Zuni Indian, veteran and runner of the tribe, pushing his tired body the utmost in one last burst of speed, crossed the finish line to take third place in the gruelling contest, after Flying Cloud, tribesman of Mad Bull, had captured second prize.

A crew of men with tractors and graders are at work leveling the aviation landing field at Alturas, Modoc county, in anticipation of the landing of army planes engaged in aerial forest patrol this season. The work is being done by the United States Forest Service in co-operation with the Alturas Golf Club, Alturas Round-up Association and Modoc county, the field itself being county property.

Thomas Sochran, employe of a transfer company of Lindsay, has announced he will be an entrant in a coast to coast hiking trip. The pedestrians are to end their jaunt in New York city. The rules require that participants make all the journey on foot, either walking or running.

A nation-wide appeal urging all America to support the San Francisco Bay bridge program was broadcast by members of the official bridge commission enroute to Washington. The commission has based its plea on the belief that the bay bridge project has assumed the proportions of a national issue.

A marine department for the Stockton Chamber of Commerce was authorized by the board of directors at a recent meeting. George Ditz, prominent attorney, was appointed to serve as chairman of the marine department committee.

T. O'Hanrahan of Truckee is clearing the site of his Sierra Tavern destroyed by fire recently, and will then begin the erection of a steel and concrete building. The new hotel will be three stories, and contain between fifty and sixty rooms.

Lightning arresters to protect 8,000,000 barrels of crude oil in the Standard Oil Company reservoirs north of Bakersfield, near Kern county airport, will be constructed immediately, it is announced. The new equipment will protect 16,500,000 barrels earthenware reservoirs from fire by lightning.

A thirty-foot shark weighing approximately four tons, was caught by a crab fisherman at the lower end of Monterey Bay last week, when the monster became entangled in his nets. The man cut the nets loose and left the fish.

Trapped by the Great Western Power Company's recently heightened dam, run-off waters in the high Sierras of Plumas county are forming the greater Lake Almanor—a body of water that now measures 650,000 acre feet. The raising of the dam has made possible the formation of a mountain lake with an area of forty-five square miles. Previously, when filled to capacity, it measured twenty-five square miles.

California's typhoid fever death rate dropped to 2.86 for every 100,000 residents last year, this being less than one-eleventh of the rate which prevailed twenty years ago, it has been announced by the State Board of Health. The total deaths were given as 118 for 1926. No typhoid deaths whatever were reported in 36 of the State's 58 counties, not considering incorporated territory. The report said 28 cities also had clean records.

The University of California at Los Angeles is running the Berkeley campus of the institution a close second in popularity for summer session work. An average of sixty enquirles a day from other cities and states are received at the office of the dean of summer sessions. Classes opened June 25.

The interstate divorce colony recently opened on the shores of Lake Tahoe, is filled to capacity through advance reservations from persons seeking to take advantage of the lenient Nevada divorce laws while living in California. Most of the guests are women. The place itself is half in Nevada and half in California. An inlaid line through the center of the large dance floor marks the State boundary. Sleeping quarters are in Washoe county, Nevada. This permits divorce seekers to satisfy the residence requirements of Nevada while virtually living on the shore of Lake Tahoe in California. Also, they may receive mail in California when they wish their intentions of speedy divorce kept secret.

California's seven teachers' colleges this month added 576 teachers to the army of 22,303 now employed in the elementary schools. These figures have just been announced following a check by the Credentials Commission. San Jose led the field of elementary teacher training institutions with 203, with Fresno second with 111.

Believing that a fare increase is not justified, the Sacramento City Council has instructed the city attorney to oppose on behalf of the city government the application of local street railways for a raise in fare from 5 to 7 cents.

Grain and barley valued at $20,000 were destroyed by flames which swept over 640 acres on the C. F. Day ranch at Patterson, 26 miles west of Modesto last week.

"Death Crossings" on the State Highway south of Modesto, will be eliminated before the end of this year, according to an announcement from R. E. Pierce, division engineer of the State Highway Commission. The work of eliminating the crossings will involve the construction of a subway to cost $100,000. Bids will be opened the latter part of this month and work will start the early part of August.

Intoxication, speeding, reckless driving and other violations of the State motor vehicle act cost thirty-four California motorists their operators' licenses during May, according to a report issued by Frank G. Snook, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles. The May revocations brought the total for the year to 198, one-half of which were charged with driving while intoxicated.

R. R. Veale, 63-year-old Contra Costa county Sheriff, embarked on his third marital venture last week. Veale, who has been Sheriff of Contra Costa country for thirty-two years, was married in his own office to Mrs. Marion Cranston Wright, former El Cerrito postmistress, now prominent in school social work.

Soil from the graves of two World war veterans, Julius Keeley and Arthur O. Sherman, both Lindsay boys who died in action overseas, their bodies being brought to Lindsay for interment in Olive Cemetery, will be carried to France by Ralph W. L. Wright, adjutant of the Lindsay post, who leaves soon for Paris to attend the American Legion reunion. There are a half dozen graves of Lindsay's heroic dead sleeping in France, and under this plan, they will be buried under the soil of the homeland.

The news of the starting of construction by the Southern Pacific on the Modoc Northern from Klamath Falls to Alturas and the activity already evident towards the broad-gauging of the Nevada, California & Oregon Railway, owned for the past year by the Southern Pacific, has caused great enthusiasm and a more generally optimistic outlook on the part of local farmers and lumbermen in that section.

Within a month Shafter, Kern county residents will vote upon a $30,000 bond issue to improve the community domestic water system by drilling two new water wells and installing new mains.

Three summer camps for University of California students enrolled for four years work in the R. O. T. C. at Berkeley, started June 17. The Air Service Unit is stationed this year at Crissey Field, San Francisco; the Infantry Unit is stationed at the Monterey Presidio and the Coast Artillery and the Ordnance Units are at Fort Casey, Washington.

Gain of 200 new members within three months, increasing the number of names on the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce membership roll to 1286 without one delinquent member, establishes a new record of Pacific Coast members, it is believed.

A steel storage tank twenty-nine feet high and with a capacity of 200,000 gallons is to be added to Lindsay's municipal water plant equipment this summer, the city trustees having let a contract for the construction of the tank to a Chicago contracting firm. The contract price is $4085.

FAMOUS MINING STRIKES

By THOMAS E. STEWARD

Mine Salting With a Cigarette

AUSTRALIA is said to have been the point of origin for one of the most ingenious methods of salting gold mines ever devised. This was done by putting some gold dust in a hand-rolled cigarette, which the faker smoked as the examiner was washing out his specimens. By flicking the ashes into the pan, the gold was put in the sand in a way that almost no one could suspect. In some attempts this scheme is said to have succeeded.

Miners have gone so far as to haul wagonload after wagonload of material to a dump beside a hole in the ground, which was then filled with water. The rich material, brought from elsewhere, would be pointed out as ore from the water-filled hole. At other places, shotguns have been loaded with rich gold dust and discharged into the earth at places where the expert might be expected to take samples.

Many examiners have been saved from serious mistakes by the fact that free gold such as is found in river sands is necessarily in rather smooth and rounded particles as a result of the action of water and sand. Inexpert salters often use gold from underground mines to salt such a tract, with the result that the examiner instantly observes that these rough-edged, irregular particles could not have lain for ages in river sands, which would have polished and smoothed them.

Mining engineers must exercise a good deal of tact in reporting to owners whom they suspect of salting. More than one man has been "escorted" from camp after denouncing men they suspected of trickery.

Not long ago a Mexican who was trying to sell a silver mine took out a large amount of material from a rich but very narrow vein and smeared it in all parts of the mine where he thought an examiner would take samples. Ore in this tiny vein ran from 1,000 to 4,000 ounces of silver to the ton of material, so that the report would have shown the mine to be of extraordinary richness had the investigator been deceived.

But it is one of the rules of mine examination to scrape off all loose earth and get a typical sample from well settled earth. Following this rule was the salvation of this particular examiner. He took samples in many places where the mine had been salted, it is true, but he scraped away the loose earth and got specimens from beneath. These specimens showed the mine to be worth buying.

After the mine had been working for some time it proved to be producing 42 ounces of silver to the ton. His report had estimated the yield at 46 ounces, which is considered a remarkably close estimate.

Gold From Vanished Mountains

THE discovery of particles of gold in the river sands, where they have been washed down as time passed from a natural deposit "in place" in some nearby mountains, has often been a signal for miners to look for the native deposit after they have exhausted the "float" gold that has been washed into the valley. Geologically the gold deposits of California proved to be of intense interest because the "lode" or natural deposit could never be found. Geologists finally determined the truth, which was that California gold was in the debris of huge mountains that had been entirely washed away from their original location millions of years ago. The deep deposits of gold bearing gravel were all that was left of a massive chain of quartz mountains, rich in gold, which at some point far back in geologic time had stood in the neighborhood of the modern sierras.

It is true that there was gold and gold bearing quartz "in place" at many points in the Sierras, but the other theory was borne out by the discovery that the biggest gravel deposits were in what had once been the bed of a huge river that had run at right angles to the direction in which the California streams now flow. This huge river bed had been completely filled with the detritus from the ancient mountains, and it was in this material, especially, that the rich gold deposits were found.

This ancient river bed came to be known as "the Big Blue Lead." It was a mile wide, as much as 400 feet deep in places, and extended for a distance of fully 50 miles. The age of this "ravine" is indicated by the fact that it was 1,500 feet above the present level of the Bear river, which had worn its ravine deeper and deeper with the passage of almost incalculable time.

While the miners never found the lode above the alluvial deposits from which the gold might have been washed down, they did eventually discover a very rich lode under the alluvial gravel and eventually they turned their attention to the mining of this quartz deposit. It was known as the Veta Madre or Mother lode, a huge vein, six to thirty feet in width, which at places descended to a great depth into the native rock.

Nearly all of the gold mining now carried on in California is in these quartz mines, some of which are still opened up occasionally.

Old Jewish Coinage

The gold talent of the Jews in ancient times was equal to 10,000 shekels; the silver talent to 3,000 shekels. The Jews did not possess coined money until after the Captivity, and the earliest allusions are to the coins of Persia.

FACTS VS. OPINION

We have heard so much comment recently on the application of the Pacific Telephone Company for a raise of rates in San Francisco that we stopped J. D. Worthington, manager of the company in this district, to obtain some information.

"Isn't the telephone company getting enough for their service?" we asked. "The telephone company," replied Worthington, "has no money. It is operated on money belonging to the stockholders, and the directors cannot afford to use the money of other people if they do not make a fair return on their investment."

"Will the railroad commission grant the increase in rates?" we asked. "If the commission, after a thorough investigation, finds that the telephone company is entitled to higher rates," replied Worthington, "we will get higher rates. If the investigation shows that the present rates are sufficient, we will not."

"And the commission represents the people?" we asked. "Certainly!" "Then the people fix their own rates, after due consideration of the facts?" "Yes, that is what it amounts to." "Then why," we asked, "should the people kick if their own representatives see fit to allow the telephone company to charge higher rates?"

"Well," said Worthington, "the people who kick have an idea that the telephone company is getting rich, and that an increase in rates is just more money in the coffers of a corporation. But the railroad commission deals in facts, carefully studied facts, and opinions have no place in their decisions. If the people who are kicking would get the facts instead of their personal opinions, there would be less kicking in the world. But we know that our case will receive a fair deal at the hands of the railroad commission, and our rates, whatever they may be, will be fair rates, even as judged by the people's own representatives."

Education Needed Now If Liberty is to Continue

Almost a century and a half ago George Washington said: "The time has now come when a plan of universal education ought to be adopted by the United States." Later, one almost as glorious in the history of the young republic, said: "I do most anxiously wish to see education given to all so that they may read and understand what is going on in the world and keep their part of it going right."

For a number of years those interested in the welfare of this country, and those who realize the necessity for the elimination of illiteracy have sought to establish a Department of Education with a Secretary in the President's Cabinet. They have met with opposition, as have others who promote progressive measures and legislation. Those of the opposition are able to theorize as to what may possibly happen should such a department be established, while its supporters can point to the departments that we now have, as concrete examples of the work it will accomplish. So, undaunted, the latter have continued the fight, and today the establishment of this department is looked on with favor by a majority of the people, and many newspapers comment upon it favorably.

If America is ever to become the 'melting pot,' if its people are ever to become homogeneous, to love the same ideals, and to work for the realization of objectives for which the more intelligent Americans are now striving, it must be through the public school system.

Just how lax we have been in stamping out illiteracy was shown in the draft statistics during the war. Here it was shown that in the presidential election of 1916 there were 4,300,000 illiterate voters—this in the United States, where we are wont to boast of our schools.

In a republic such as ours the ability of the people to read and understand is of vital importance to the government. Its very existence as a free institution may depend upon it. The government should, therefore, use every resource at its command to stamp out illiteracy, and create a truly enlightened electorate.

BRUNO WALTER TO PLAY AT PHILHARMONIC CONCERT

New interest in the summer series of symphony concerts in Woodland Theater, Hillsborough, will be awakened next Sunday by the coming of Bruno Walter, one of Europe's most famous conductors. This will be Mr. Walter's first appearance in California, though he is to give a series of concerts in San Francisco and Hollywood. He is to direct the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra in the following program:

Overture, "Romeo and Juliet," Tschaikowsky.

"Birthday of the Infanta," Franz Schreker.

Overture, "Wotan's Farewell and Fire Music," Wagner.

Prelude and Love Death, from "Tristan," Wagner.

Overture, "Rienzi," Wagner.

Mr. Walter is conductor of the Vienna State Opera, and successor to the late Felix Mottl at the Munich Oera. He is director general of the Munich Festivals, and he has had long experience as musical dirceor of the Municipal Opera in Berlin and as conductor at Covent Garden, London.

BOYS ENJOY CAMPING AT SCOUT CAMP

Boys of San Mateo county who have signed up for places in Camp Yu-MI-Ci-A, the new Y. M. C. A. boys' camp, are counting the days on their fingers in anticipation of the good times that are in store for them. This camp is about seven miles from Pescadero and about a mile from the County Memorial Park.

Reports from the aggregation from the Mission Branch Y. M. C. A. who went into camp last Monday, are that they are having the "time of their lives."

This camp is not of the "summer resort" type, but of the real "woodsy" kind. The large white tents, each of which accommodates seven boys and a leader, are placed informally so as to form a great tent circle.

The boys are especially enthusiastic about the eats. The menus are the results of twenty-six years of experience in handling boys in the Y. M. C. A. camps in the Bay District.

In addition to knowing how to make tasty, wholesome food, the boys say that the cook is a real gentleman. He holds sway over the uy-proof kitchen in which there is running water and other conveniences which are rare, indeed, in such a camp. The dining room in the thick shade of the many varieties of trees is kept in spotless condition. The swimming-hole is a thing of beauty. Mother nature has fashoined this pool wiht its sparkling clear water by forcing Pescadero creek to make a sharp turn at this point. One bank runs out very graudally making a fine place where those who are just learning to swim may be handled to an advantage, while the other runs nearly straight up for several hundred feet with ferns growing here and there. This side runs deeper and is fine for diving. All periods for swimming are supervised.

The nine-hole golf course for woodland golf is unique. The golf clubs and balls are made by the boys themselves from material at hand. The tent group wth the lowest average score is the winner.

The tent leaders are not merely advisors for the tent group, but are real pals to the boys. They are just as much a part of the tent team as any of the boys, participating with them in all events. This brings about a close comradeship that is rare in most camps.

To be a member of the camp honor society is the greatest ambition of each and every boy. This can only be won by showing real character worth, a wole-hearted desire to be of real service to every other fellow and a cheerful disposition under all circumstances.

The great aim of the camp is character development and all activities are set with this end in view.

In order that the boys can be given individual attention each of the camp periods is limited to 56 boys.

Parents who are interested in this camp should get in touch with the local Y. M. C. A. secretary, Roy A. Hohberger, by calling Redwood 974-J as soon as possible.

The younger boys' camp period starts July 11. This section is filling up rapidly. Boys 9 to 12 years of age are eligible. Registrations should be made for this period at once in order that places may be held.

The camp is open to all boys of San Mateo county irrespective of whether they are members of Y. M. C. A. clubs or not. The fee is $10 for the ten-day period.

MOTORISTS URGED TO PRACTICE SAFETY OVER HOLIDAY WEEK-END

Safety first on the Fourth of July is no longer a matter confined to precaution in the handling of explosives and firecrackers, particularly when the holiday comes on a Monday, as it does this year, providing a three-day week-end .Safe motoring is becomng annually more important as this summer holiday yearly brings thousands more cars onto the open road.

California highways and byways will be alive with motor cars carrying happy families to the great outdoors this coming Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and in the crushing press of traffic danger will be greatly increased. That the Independence Day traffic accident toll may be kept at a minimum, the Public Safety Department of the California State Automobile Association today broadcast a "safety first" appeal to motorists. Drivers are urged to intensify their normal precautions. The association touring bureau offices in 26 cities of Northern and Central California report a volume of inquiries which presages a record holiday travel movement.

Here are some of the fundamental safety precautions advised by the Automobile Association Public Safety Department for holiday driving:

"Be courteous and use common sense; remember there are thousands of beginning drivers on the roads, and make allowance for their shortcomngs. Observe traffic regulations.

"Inspect your car, don't go unprepared; be sure of mechanical equipment, then the rest is up to your driving; see that lights are not blinding, that brakes are adequate, and that everything is shipshape.

"Start early to make fast driving unnecessary and to avoid some of the congestion; don't speed, but maintain a steady pace that the maximum of traffic may move; don't drive fast on strange roads after dark as many cars will be moving out of side roads onto main routes.

"Keep to your side of the road; sound horn near top of grades, at curves, and where vision is obstructed; turn onto side roads and park clear of traffic when making repairs.

"Be especially vigilant late in the afternoon when weariness makes many drivers less wary. Remember that more accidents occur in the open countrf than on city streets and that there are more in daylight than at night.

"Be sure that camping equipment does nto project past the hub caps of your car on the left-hand side and that it does not obscure your vision to the rear.

"Drive carefully onto and off of ferries and do not start your engine until ferry has docked.

"Remember that railway trains will also increase and that more trains will be running making caution at grade crossings doubly imperative. Look and listen and heed warnng signs.

"Prepare for your outing make resort reservations in advance and secure reliable road data and touring nformation in advance. Thousands of trips are marred by unreliable road information."

DEPENDABILITY

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

Show me the man who has fought his way far
On the long, rugged road to success;
Tell me the story of how he prevailed
Over problems or fear or distress;
Give me the facts of his early career
And a candid report of his youth—
Then we shall find your account testifies
To this great unassailable truth:
They win achievement's high estate
Or prove themselves commendable,
Who early learn that none is great
Who is not first dependable!

Many there are who complain of the luck
That has caused them to fall by the way;
Many who curse because others, they claim,
Have enticed them to wander astray.
Yes, there are thousands of fellows who fail,
Where there's one who climbs on to the top;
Fortune has always been kind to the man
Who lets nothing persuade him to stop.
They win achievement's high estate
Or prove themselves commendable,
Who early learn that none is great
Who is not first dependable!

30 YEARS AGO

June 26, 1897

Frank West of Portland, Oregon, a nephew of Mrs. Frank P. Thompson, is on a visit to his relatives here.

Dr. Villain has purchased an elegant horse and buggy and can now visit distant patients in quick time.

S. Hilson, father of A. Hilson, will open a cigar store in Redwood City about the middle of next month. He will occupy the store formerly occupied by Leo Indig.

Charles Heiner, Malcolm Boyd and Frank Preader have gone to Sonora to seek fame and fortune in the mines. There is already quite a colony of Redwood people in that county delving for the yellow metal.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Mansfield and three children, Bert, Harland and Margeleon Saturday attended the family reunion of N. H. Martins at Lobitas. Mr. Martin, who is one of the old landmarks of the coast, is the father of Mrs. Mansfield. Six grownup children of Mr. Martin were present, together with their numerous progeny, making a total of twenty-two. The gathering was one of the happiest that ever assembled in that section of the county.

Atherton Macondray and his young wife are cosily ensconsed in the Russell cottage.

F. P. Roach won the first prize in the fat man's race at the picnic at San Jose last Sunday.

A handsome line of new clothing. Men's suits $2.75 and up; boy's suits $1.50 and up. Einstein & Small.

The municipal election last Saturday passed off quietly. There were only 263 votes polled. Following is the result:

For trustees—Henry Beeger, 234; L. S. Bean, 211; George Winter, 171; George H. Rice, 154; G. Plump, 153; Jas. Hilton, 123; G. P. Hartley, 93; Wm. Hughs, 78.

Clerk, Dan Stafford, 194.

Marshal, John Christ, 194.

Treasurer, L. P. Behrens, 161.

BUILDING PERMIT SECURED FOR NEW GRAMMAR SCHOOL

A building permit was secured this week by E. K. Nelson, San Francisco contractor, for the erection of the new grammar school on James street. The permit cost Nelson $260. The contract calls for the erection of a reinforced concrete building to cost $147,300. The building is to be ready for occupancy immediately after the first of the year.

LOCATION TRIPS ARE TOO STRENUOUS

Francis X. Bushman, Jr., Joan Crawford and Rockliffe Fellowes in "The UNDERSTANDING HEART"

Miss Crawford Prefers to Do Outdoor Scenes in Studio Backyard.

Joan Crawford returned from her first "location trip," a disillusioned and wiser girl.

In her other pictures, and they have been few, the actress never had the opportunity to go any further than the "back lot" of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios for a "location," so when she was told that she was going to Yosemite to make scenes for "The Understanding Heart," the picture coming to the Sequoia Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, July 6-7, she was very happy.

However, disillusionment soon set in. The first morning Joan was rudely awakened at 5 o'clock to get her breakfast, and make-up, to catch the rays of the early morning sun. She began work at 7 a. m., and declares she spent the entire morning jumping from crag to crag on Inspiration Point, two thousand feet above the valley.

Then a cold "business man's" lunch was set before her, and immediately after she began repeating the mountain-climbing process. Joan says that her perpendicular movements far exceeded the horizontal during the trip.

Old Sol made up for his early rise by his timely setting, however, and the company stopped work at 5 to return to the camp in the valley, where a cold plunge refreshed them enough to eat dinner.

It is difficult to imagine Joan, Hollywood's first and foremost "Charlestoner," retiring at 8 o'clock, but she was ready at that time every night.

Jack Conway directed "The Understanding Heart," from the popular novel by Pettr B. Kyne that was published serially in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. It is a Cosmopolitan production.

SUPERVISOR IS FINED $100

When Supervisor Hickey of South San Francisco appeared before Justice of the Peace George A. Kertell of San Mateo for sentence on Monday he was fined $100. Hickey was tried and found guilty on Friday of a charge of reckless driving following a crash on the highway last week when his car and one driven by John McLure of San Mateo collided at the intersection of the highway and Mt. Diablo avenue.

The charges of reckless driving were preferred against Hickey by McLure, who alleged that the supervisor entered an intersection without observing an arterial stop sign. Hickey was represented by an attorney at the trial on Monday, and many witnesses were called by both sides. The main corroborating witness for the plaintiff was E. H. Peterson, who was a witness to the accident.

Hickey's attorney has announced that he will appeal the case to the superior court. The case is looked on with interest, as the outcome may determine the authority of a city government to enforce the arterial stop ordinance.

BEST TIME TO CLEAN THE RADIATORS

The best time to drain and flush the radiator of your car is immediately after a long run, according to the Free Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. Sediment is then circulating and will more easily drain off.

NEW HOMES PLANNED FOR DUMBARTON PARK

Twenty-five new homes are about to be erected in Dumbarton Park on the highway across the road from Selby Lane close to Redwood City. Lumber is already on the ground ready for construction. The dwellings to be built by a San Francisco contractor are to cost between seven and ten thousand dollars.

SAN FRANCISCO EDITOR WRITES ON COUNTY

In the last issue of the San Francisco Tribune, Edward H. Hurlbut, editor and owner of that publication, devoted almost the entire front page to a glowing eulogy on San Mateo county and its land and scenic values, with particular reference to the areas around Redwood City and San Carlos.

Hurlbut is an old Redwood City boy, a graduate of the Sequoia high school wth the pioneer class of '98. He attended Stanford university from here. He has been in newspaper and magazine work in San Francisco for nearly twenty-five years and was the author of the "Lanagan" stories, appearing in Collier's Weekly and many other national publications.

He has been spending some time in San Carlos, where his aged father resides, and in Redwood City, where he is contesting the will of his late stepmother, devising all the Hurlbut property to her daughter, the wife of a San Francisoc policeman.

Our First Anniversary Celebration

In honor of the formation of the West's largest food concern

JULY 1, 1926—just a year ago—the two foremost food distributing organizations in the West joined hands for the purpose of eliminating waste, increasing efficiency, improving service and lowering food costs to the public. It is a date of much importance to every family in ten western states because it marks the taking of the greatest forward step in the economical distribution of the necessities of life that the West has ever known.

Out of this fusing of the brain-power, training and financial strength of two great organizations having the same high ideals of service—this uniting of abilities, purposes and endeavors—has come the West's largest food concern and America's most efficient and economical method of retail food store operation.

The results have already been of untold benefit to the consuming public. In one year the savings effected through our united efforts and enormous facilities have run into staggering totals—savings that went into the pockets of our patrons in the form of materially lowered living costs. Many needless and expensive handlings of merchandise have been done away with, unsuspected loss and waste have been discovered and eliminated, quality has been brought under rigid control and a standard of service established that has no equal anywhere.

Our own growth has been equally satisfactory. During the year more than one hundred new units have been added, bringing the total to well over one thousand at this time. We have extended our operations to the extreme eastern border of the state of Nebraska and within a few weeks we expect to be operating over the states of Kansas and New Mexico. Sales have increased from about $60,000,000 annually to approximately $75,000,000 and, the end is not yet!

In view of all these things we feel that we ought to celebrate—do something out of the ordinary in honor of this significant occasion. Therefore, on the dates named below, we will offer you the opportunity to effect unusual savings on your foods in order that you, too, may join with us in an appreciation of the good things thus far accomplished. Note the dates and prepare to stock up liberally.

Nash Announces Three Entirely New Series of Cars

Three entirely new series of s including 21 models on four erent chassis lengths are an- nced today by The Nash Mo- s Company.

The new series will be known the Advanced Six, the Special and the Standard Six and de- te a wide array of costly im- rovements, these cars are also ering new lower prices, the uctions ranging as high as 95.00.

A new radiator design, lower and more sweeping body lines and a brilliant array of new color combinations make these new models without question the most beautiful ever produced by Nash, and the cars fully justify reports which have been current for the past week that Nash would introduce an array of cars which would command nationwide praise.

Important mechanical refinements and impropements are also announced at this time, keeping pace with the progress which has been made in increasing the beauty of the cars' appearance. Outstanding among these are the introduction of new springs of a secret alloy steel which is said to increase riding comfort in amazing degree.

The new body lines are lower and more sweeping than ever before and the wheels are smaller, giving an additional appearance of lowness to the cars although interior roominess has not been sacrificed in the smallest degree.

As far as the Advanced Six series is concerned, the most important change is, of course, the adoption of new lower body lines, new body colors and a deeper radiator. A number of important refinements in the interior and under the hood have also been made, however. The clutch, flywheel and crankshaft are now balanced as a unit on a highly sensitive machine for increased smoothness in operation Body quietness is increased by the use of a fender welt consisting of a contoured piece of heavy fabric-covered felt between the body and the fenders of the car. Springs are of the new secret process alloy steel type for increased riding comfort.

The improvements which have been made in the Special Six series are very similar to those which have been made on the Advanced Six. The body lines are lower and more sweeping and the wheels are smaller. New alloy steel springs have been adopted.

And the other refinements including balancing of the clutch, flywheel and crankshaft, the fender welt, the nickel steering column, the new accelerator, etc., are now a part of all Special Six models.

HOWARD ESTATE IS LOCAL PARADISE

San Mateo county has long been noted for its beautiful homes, particularly that portion of the southern end of the peninsula where in early days the Athertons, the Selbys, Donohoes, Stanfords and Floods established big estates, there living in luxury and grandeur. The nabobs of Europe never enjoyed such luxury. The London Graphic in a recent issue lauded the peninsula saying among other things that there were only two other places in the world that enjoyed the even temperature of Menlo Park, Redwood City and those two favored countries were the Canary Islands and a portion of the Reviera. There are many estates in and around Redwood City, but there is none that rivals the beautiful Howard home on the Woodside road, a six minutes spin in an automobile from the center of the county seat. This attractive place comprises twenty-eight acres of land nestling in the rolling hills, sheltered from winds, away from the reach of Jack Frost, and where tropical fruits grow luxuriantly. Bananas are growing there in profusion while oranges reach a state of perfection like those of southern California.

The elevation of the property gives one a magnificent view of bay and mountains, valley and undulating landscape stretching out to green hills, ripening orchards and to fertile spots. The scenery as beheld from the front porch of the cosy dwelling is entrancing and thrilling and once seen cannot be easily forgotten.

In front of the well-kept gardens surrounding the attractive home runs the Woodside road, paved and smooth as glass, the delight of the motorist. Across this thoroughfare is located the Menlo Golf and Country Club, where the elite and wealthy meet on the links every day. The club is one of the most prominent and wealthiest in the state. The grounds consisting of two hundred acres are attractive and beautiful, there sloping hillsides are covered with a carpet of green, mingling with flower beds or choice shrubs. At the top of the hill, just opposite the front door of the Howard home, across the road, is the cosy clubhouse that cost in the neighborhood of a quarter of a million dollars.

To the rear of the Howard estate may be seen the Stanford buildings, while a little to the south looms Mount Hamilton, grand and awe-inspiring, and to the west the Sierra Morena mountains raise their peaks in supreme majesty and to the east in the distance is seen the busy city of Redwood, nestling close to its valuable water front which affords splendid shipping facilities for the adjacent country.

The Howard dwelling is a snug, comfortable hacienda with wide porches nearly surrounding the structure, and from which one enjoys a beautiful vista of the landscape. The rambling halls leading to large and cosy rooms, well furnished, where rare antiques and bric-a-brac may be seen and enjoyed. Blooming vines creep around the home, lending shade and fragrance to the scene. To this almost sybaritic home, Mr. Howard has brought as his guests men of note and rank who have sang the praises of the home in many countries.

Leading from the dwelling to the road in front is a palm drive with lawn on either side backed by flowering beds of every hue. At the end of the pretty drive near the home is a Bourgainvillaea vine in full bloom. Perhaps nowhere else in the state can a prettier sight be seen. The plant, which is quite old, covers a large area. It is covered with an abundance of purple blossoms. One is inspired with a sight of this riot of blooms covering many yards and one lingers and views with amazement this floral phenomonen. Close by are ancient fig trees, crowded with ripening fruit, while not far distant is the family orchard, with choice fruit trees of numerous varieties and that never is harmed by the frost. The abundant water supply on the estate provides plenty of irrigation for all purposes so that almost any vegetable and fruit may be grown on the estate in surprising abundance.

The Howard home is a fit residence for the gods, one that a king might envy and where comfort and pleasure may be had and enjoyed by the most fastidious, just a place to secure a foretaste of heaven.

The Death in the Cards.

After supper James McAlpin, with some ceremony, drove Selwood's team—the rangy American bays—up to the hotel. Christie came out on Selwood's arm, bandages and all. It was their first ride together, and Christie was to be driver.

They drove out on the divide for a few more minutes to themselves, and then down and around by the river to the camp of the padre. They found him before a little camp-fire.

"You married my father and mother, Padre," said Selwood, when he had told his own and Christie's story. "We want you to marry us."

While they talked, Selwood fed the little fire with the driftwood the Indians had gathered. The padre told of that other marriage—of the night, the storm, the flooded river, and the pine-torches of the Indians.

After leaving the camp, Christie and Selwood drove back to the hotel, hoping everybody had gone to bed, but in this they were doomed to disappointment. In the brightly lighted office a brave company of frontier adventurers, closely tuned to Selwood's movements, were tirelessly sitting in a suffocating atmosphere around a seriously overheated stove.

Christie was allowed to go upstairs unmolested; indeed, she was ignored with chivalrous ceremony. Selwood, on the other hand, was dragged into the office and held a victim till he could negotiate peace with his retainers, and effected his escape, in the end, only by inviting them all to a wedding at sunrise down at the river in the camp of the padre.

In the dawn of a glorious morning they were married—perhaps on such a spot as that to which Selwood's father had brought his bride-to-be, in the storm, so many years before.

After the wedding breakfast, attended by all the guests, with the padre as a special guest of honor, Christie persuaded her new husband to go up with her to General Roper's room. The old man, weakened by wounds and softened by years, broke and asked his grandson to forgive what had passed.

It was one of those moments for banishing resentments and forgetting the cruelties of pride and obstinacy. Christie wiped the tears from the old man's eyes, and he repaid her by throwing a bomb into her unsuspecting camp when he sincerely congratulated them both and named as the only favor he would ask that the first boy be named John Roper Selwood and sent to West Point.

For a day or two, no trip and no escape from work was possible for Selwood. He was up to his neck in work at the barns and the warehouse, straightening out the tangle into which the conflagration and the rioting at Sleepy Cat had thrown the stage and wagon schedules. During the day scattered lots of supplies began to filter in from Medicine Bend, and by nightfall the hotel cook was able to promise Doctor Carpy a respectable wedding supper as his compliment to the bride and groom, and to a company from which no loyal friend was excluded.

At nine o'clock in the evening behind the closely curtained windows of the dining-room, wedding guests made merry. Christie, flushed with happiness, had stolen from the table for a moment to run up to the general's room with a piece of wedding cake, when one of the two waitresses, coming up behind Selwood's chair, whispered in his ear.

The bridegroom's face clouded. "Who is it?" he demanded in an impatient undertone. "Is it one of my men?"

"I don't know, Mr. Selwood. I don't think so. I never saw him before."

"Tell him," directed Selwood, vexed, "to come around in the morning; I've worked about fourteen hours today."

The waitress appeared perplexed. "I told him you wouldn't want to be interrupted," she said in an earnest whisper. "But it seemed like he was in terrible trouble. He told me to ask you for God's sake to come out to see him for just a minute."

Selwood muttered a protest. "Where is he?" he asked in an aside.

"At the kitchen door."

The girl thought that Selwood's keen eyes would have burned her up during the instant before he spoke again. "Tell him," he continued in a low voice, "to go around to the front door and sit down on the porch with his face to the street—understand? To go around to the front door and sit down on the porch with his face to the street," he repeated, "and his back to the door."

The waitress passed out into the kitchen. When she returned she whispered again. "He's gone to the front door, Mr. Selwood."

The talk had all been going on around the table, but Pardaloe's snaky eyes had not lost sight of the low-spoken colloquy. "What's a-matter, John?" he demanded suspiciously.

"Some stranger outside wants to see me," answered Selwood, rising. "I'll be right back."

Pardaloe was on his feet before Selwood had taken a step from the table. He put up his bear-paw of a hand. "Hold on, John!" he said definitely, pushing back his chair. "You don't go out alone to see no stranger tonight, 'specially not in your recent shape—hold your horses."

The table rose as one man. There was a momentary upset, and some conflict of claims as to who should accompany Selwood. Without passing on these in words, Selwood nodded to Pardaloe, and the discussion ceased. The mule boss followed him in long strides toward the dining-room door.

Bob Scott, at the table, sat close to the door leading into the dining-room from the kitchen. The other two men had not got out of the room when Scott, with his habitual smile of apology, rose in perfect silence and with incredible celerity slipped out into the kitchen and was out of the back door and half way around to the front of the hotel in the dark by the time Pardaloe had carefully drawn every shade in the hotel office and beckoned to Selwood to come in from the hall. He, himself, then slipped across the hall into Carpy's private office, and, throwing up the sash of the window that commanded the porch, trained his shotgun on the outer gloom.

Selwood, his revolver in his left hand, threw open the hall door without exposing himself. Seated on the porch, his face to the street, sat a large, loosely built man with his head hidden in a dark pull-down cap. "Who are you and what do you want?" asked Selwood, inspecting his caller from behind the hall door and through the crack of the opening.

"You know me, John," answered the man, hoarse and short in utterance. "But I ain't very popular in these parts just now."

"What's your name?"

"I'd like to give that to you private, John. I'm keeping some under cover."

Something in the cadence of the words told Selwood that he knew the man. A question that followed was only a precaution, for he felt sure from the cracked and husky tones that the man was Big Haynes.

In the Dawn of a Glorious Morning They Were Married.

"Whoever you are, you're well covered where you sit," remarked Selwood, with apparent indifference.

"I know it."

"Put up your hands. Stand up and turn around here," came the next order from the hall.

The man did as he was told. A disappointment awaited Selwood's confidence in his usually keen ear. The pinched, haggard, and unshaven features now turned toward him could not be those of the bluff, portly auctioneer; a hasty glance told him this could not be Big Haynes. The cheeks were bruised and swollen, the eyes sunken in hollow sockets, and the man's clothing was in tatters.

Before Selwood could speak, a voice came from the darkness, and a man came forward. "Bob Scott is at the corner of the house, said the voice. "It's Big Haynes, John," continued the Indian, low voiced; "he's alone."

Selwood stepped from behind the door out on the porch. He could hardly credit his senses. It was two days since he had seen Haynes; but those two days had aged the man ten years.

"What in God's name has happened—did our men catch you? Have you had a fight?" Selwood asked.

"Not the kind you mean, John. Give me a drink, for God's sake, and le' me sit down and tell the story. I ain't had a bite to eat since last night."

They led him into the office, helped him into the washroom, and Scott went to the kitchen for strong coffee. Big Haynes drank four cupfuls before he could quit; then, sitting in front of Selwood, who stood with his back against the writing table, and with Pardaloe and the Indian listening, he spoke.

"We got away from here yesterday morning O K—after you turned back, Bob—Starbuck, Meg, and me, and we made time on the Medicine Bend trail till daylight. The going was pretty bad, especially on Meg. Her horse picked up a stone and went lame early in the morning, and that held us back. Then we figured out nobody would molest her, alone on the trail, nor the teamsters wouldn't bother her none about the horse, for they all knowed Meg—so we rode her over to the trail, and Starbuck and me made up to meet her at Crawling Stone creek that night—so we parted." Haynes shook his head. "There was a game woman, John, if ever there was one—"

"There was a game woman, John,'" echoed Selwood, suspicious and angry. "What do you mean?" He started. "Is Meg dead?" he thundered at Haynes. "Did Starbuck kill her?" he asked in a rage.

Haynes put up his hand. In all the wreck of his sorry plight, whatever it might be, there was something, for the first time, that commanded respect. "Let me alone, John—you'll hear it all soon enough.

"She was there ahead of us at dark, waiting—down by the quicksand crossing. We planned to take the trail when the moon come up and ride all night, but we was plum tuckered, all three of us. So Starbuck said we would go up the canyon a ways and camp for the night and rest up Meg's horse all the next day—that was today—and ride all the next night—that was tonight.

"When we thought we was up far enough for to be pretty well hid, we staked the horses up above, where there was a little grass, and built a fire down on a ledge and had supper. I never knowed, no more than a baby, that Starbuck and Meg was former man and wife—never drempt it. After supper they told me their story. Starbuck said she'd saved his life and they were going to head for the Panhandle and start over again. We didn't talk long. All Meg said was she wanted me to know she was Starbuck's real wife and she didn't like to be called just Meg, but Margaret Starbuck.

"Anyway, the two of 'em went to sleep close to the fire—I moved off a way. I was so blamed done out I just couldn't sleep—so there I was lying on my back on the rock, thinking where'd I land next, when I began to hear a funny kind of noise. And it kept getting louder 'n' louder, 'n' funnier and funnier—up the canyon. I lifted up to look, and there, away up the canyon, I seen a big white streak stretched clear across it, right from wall to wall, and roaring. I set up and called down to Starbuck, and pointed. 'What's that white thing?' I says.

"He jumped like he was shot. 'WATER!' he yells. 'Margaret!' he yells. 'Cloudburst! Quick! for your life! Grab your saddle, Haynes! Get to the horses! Up! Up!'

"He grabbed their two saddles. I grabbed my saddle, and we made, hard as we could, up the canyon wall. I'd got maybe ten feet when I heard Meg scream—she'd fell down. The water was crashing and roaring down on us like all hell was let loose. She yelled to Starbuck to save himself. He dropped the saddles and picked up Meg and started climbing with her—and the water struck us.

"I was maybe twenty feet higher than Starbuck and Meg. If I'd been forty feet it wouldn't have helped; that water was a hundred feet deep. It picked me up like a match, and picked them up, and picked the horses up—I never knew a thing till I came to, on a shelf away down the canyon. I was pounded clean to pieces. How I ever lived I don't know—but there I was.

"I looked careful for signs and kept calling Starbuck and Meg—but didn't have no hope much of ever seeing 'em again till I spied something, down at the mouth of the canyon, and pretty well out in the creek on a gravel bar. First I thought it was a big piece of driftwood; then I thought it was one of the horses. I seen, when I got closter, it wasn't. It was Starbuck and Meg.

"I waded a ways out into the creek and got pretty near the sand bar to see if either of 'em was alive. Meg's skirt must 'a' caught in a snag on the bar, and that held 'em there when the water went down. There they were, lying on the up side of the bar, with their arms tight round each other—and their heads part under water—Starbuck's head was clean under water."

Haynes wiped his forehead with the back of his grimy hand. "I waded back ashore and kept on down the wash till I got to the main crossing, and set down there to wait for help. Inside an hour a couple o' your wagons come along, headin' west. I told the boys the story jes' 'z' 'twas. They'd heard about the trouble at Sleepy Cat but didn't know nothin' about it. They agreed to help me. We unloaded most of the hay on one wagon and drove the wagon up the creek, close as we could to where they lay. We waded out and one of the boys took aholt of their feet, and the other one and I took their shoulders together, so we got 'em out to the wagon the way they lay, 'n' got 'em into the wagon. So, John—well—here we are."

Hollow-eyed, he said no more. Selwood, after a moment's silence, spoke to Scott. "I guess everybody's out of the kitchen," he said. "Get hold of Bull and tell him to cook some supper for Haynes and hunt up a bed for him." He turned back to Haynes. "Where are they?"

"John, we laid 'em down at the barn in the harness-room—there wa'n't no other place, 'n' I jus' plum didn't know what to do with 'em till I seen you. If you don't think it's right—"

He hesitated. Selwood finished the sentence. "It's all right," he said, rising. As he started toward the dining-room, Pardaloe laid a heavy hand on his shoulder. And he looked down at him with serious eyes. "John," he said solemnly, "remember what the cards said Saturday night at Calabasas? We couldn't figure out just how it was coming, could we? But the old deck didn't lie; death was in it that night, sure enough, wasn't it?"

Selwood stepped into the hall, to find Christie, wide-eyed, at the open door. She caught his hands. "When I came downstairs they told me you had been called from the table. I was frightened and I ran out to see where you were," she whispered. "I heard that terrible story! John, what shall we do?"

They called Carpy, and while Pardaloe told the story to the merrymakers, Selwood and Christie told the doctor.

He vowed with hardened oaths that Meg Hyde should have the best there was to be had in Sleepy Cat; and the three started for the barn—for Christie would not be denied. "Let me go, John," she pleaded. "I'm a woman, she's a woman—let me go."

* * * * * * *

They lay on a blanket rudely spread on the harness-room floor, still locked in each other's arms. Carpy held a lantern to their faces; Selwood and Christie stood at their side.

"There's a considerable bruise on his forehead," said Carpy, speaking after his brief examination. "When the water struck him, I guess it knocked him flat on the rocks. Well—load 'em into a wagon, John. We'll take 'em up to the hotel."

"To the hotel, Doc?" echoed McAlpin, who with the rest had followed from the hotel and crowded into the room.

"Where else?" roared Carpy. "Up to the hotel 'n' into my office."

Christie knelt at Margaret's side. The men stood by. Her tears moistened the dark, sand-strewn hair, as she tried to gather it up and knot it a little at Margaret Hyde's neck.

When she rose from her knees, she buried her cheek on Selwood's breast. "At least, John," were her half-whispered words, "she died where she would have asked to die—in his arms."

CHAPTER XVIII

Hearts in the West.

"What's Selwood going to do?" asked Wentworth. He was sitting with Carpy in the sunshine on the hotel porch. A week had passed since the Crawling Stone tragedy, and Sleepy Cat, though badly scarred, had already profited, rather than lost, by the efforts to exterminate its crooks and murderers.

Doctor Carpy took Wentworth's question seriously. "Selwood talked about going back East. 'Jing!' I says to him. 'If you're goin' back East I'll hand you a letter to a friend of mine there; he'll give you a job counting grass.' 'Counting grass?' he says. 'Sure,' I says. 'He's superintendent of an insane asylum. That's what they do with men that leave Sleepy Cat for to go back East.'"

Carpy hardly paused to continue. "Christie was a good deal upset about this roughness that's been goin' on here—men gettin' killed and that kind. 'Well, Christie,' I says, 'it's partly the fault of the climate. You've got to remember it's mighty hard for a man to die here—I mean, to die the old, bed-fashion, natural death. This is a wonderful climate; it's given you, my girl, a fine husband. He came out here half dead, and if he hadn't come, he'd 'a' been dead long ago. And look at him now! Why, Christie,' I says, 'if they didn't kill off somebody by main force once in a while out here, or bring in some more doctors to reduce the population, people would get so thick, they'd be laying out the mountain-tops for town lots.

"Then," the doctor went on, "Selwood talked about California. 'California!' I says. 'California? Sand! Fleas! Greasers!' Well, he thought he was goin' out there, anyway, to get hold of a little freighting business of his own. Don't seem to be no business here he likes. I offered to sell the hotel to him."

"Well," remarked Wentworth, "if a freighting business of his own is all he's looking for, he needn't go to California for it. I came up here to offer him a third interest in our line. If he'll live here and spend part of his time in Thief River, he can run this west end of the line to suit himself."

"Well, by gum, I'm thinking that'll settle it," averred Carpy. "We've got something to work on. Now let's hunt up John, and drive that partnership nail into him while the iron's hot!"

It was not, perhaps, most of all, the bribe of an already established and congenial business that held Selwood on the crest of the Rocky Mountain divide. Every morning he walked down to the barn after he had announced he was going to California, it made him sick to look into the faces of his men.

McAlpin's tail-feathers plainly drooped; Lefever's snug trousers waistband grew a world too wide for his shrunken sides, and new notches had to be cut to tighten his cartridge-belt; Pardaloe moped in and out of the stable like an ailing mule, peevish, stooped, and hollow-eyed; Bob Scott, in desperation, had had his hair cut, and no self-respecting Chippewa squaw would longer have acknowledged him a brother in blood.

How much of this desperation was weighing on Selwood's heart as he listened, sober-faced, to Wentworth's calm proposals? How much did the claims of such a man-for-man friendship as men never know, and never can know, outside the wild life of a mountain frontier, pull at his heart while he was debating what to do in a crisis of his checkered life?

But one morning there were heard at the barn more noise, more shouting, more profanity, more laughter, and more arguments—more fights were in the offing and more symptoms of crude, heartfelt rejoicing were manifest than had been known there since before the days of the Sleepy Cat riots. For that morning Selwood and Christie had come down to their hotel breakfast just as Carpy and Wentworth were leaving the dining-room. And there was that in their manner that Carpy read the moment he looked into their faces. He was not a bit surprised, even if Wentworth by any chance was, when Selwood—holding Christie in his arm—said to them both: "Well—I guess we're going to stay!"

Fighting of a Different Sort

Germany Placed on Olympic Committee

Germany has again secured representation on the executive committee of the Olympic committee by the election of Dr. Otto Lewald, president of the German Olympic committee, at a session of the International body. Doctor Lewald, Gen. Charles H. Sherrill of the United States, Count Henry Ballet Latour of Belgium, Count Polignac of France, Colonel Kentish of Great Britain and Baron Godefroy De Blonay of Switzerland were named for four years.

Goldie Johnson Earned High Place in Saddle

Another candidate for the honor of being America's foremost jockey is Goldie Johnson, who rides for E. R. Bradley's stable. He is a product of the West, having started his career on the Tia Juana track. Johnson was riding for a small salary when one of Bradley's trainers looked him over and was so impressed with the way he handled horses he recommended the youngster to Bradley.

Johnson is now one of the highest salaried jockeys in this country and likewise one of the most successful. He rode 60 winners at New Orleans last winter.

HOW MRS. WEAVER WAS HELPED

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

As Mrs. Weaver herself says, "I was never very strong." This is a mild statement describing her condition, for, according to her letters, she was subjected to no small amount of ill health. Fortunately, her sister was familiar with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged Mrs. Weaver to try it. "After three or four weeks," writes Mrs. Weaver, "I felt a great difference in myself. I would go to bed and sleep sound, and although I could not do very much work, I seemed stronger. I kept on taking it and now I am well and strong, do my work and take care of three children. I sure do tell my friends about your wonderful medicine, and I will answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Lawrence Weaver, East Smithfield St., Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

President and Household Are Established in the Black Hills.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT AND MRS. COOLIDGE, two collies, five canaries and all the necessary household attendants are now established for the summer in the South Dakota State Game Lodge, in the Black Hills. And the executive offices of the national government are established in the new high school building at Rapid City, 32 miles away. Even though Mr. Coolidge should not regain the favor of the farmers—and he is not unlikely to—he will certainly have a delightful and restful vacation in surroundings that are entirely to his taste. The lodge is on the shores of a lake surrounded by picturesque mountains, and is so secluded that comparative privacy is assured. The Chief Executive planned to make the automobile trip to Rapid City frequently to attend to the more pressing business of his office.

On his way west the President stopped a few hours in the Calumet region of northwestern Indiana to help in the dedication of Wicker park, the war memorial of Lake county. In his address he spoke of the prosperity and growth of the country in a material way, but he mildly chided the nation for delinquencies.

"In spite of all this progress," he said, "we are still a great distance from what we would like to be. Our delinquencies are sufficient to require us to put forth all our efforts to work toward their elimination. Although our government is sound and our courts are excellent, too many of us disregard the obligations of citizenship by neglecting to vote, and violence and crime are altogether too prevalent. The number who are lacking in religious devotion is altogether too large.

"While we have reached the highest point in material prosperity ever achieved, there is a considerable class of unskilled workers who have not come into full participation of the wealth of the nation."

One of the bursts of applause greeted the President's reference to Col. Charles Lindbergh when he said:

"The ideals which we seek must be practical. We are lavish in our admiration of realities. When one of your Western young men is the first to fly from America to Europe our country hails him with a popular acclaim so spontaneous, so genuine, as to disclose the true values of our national character."

South Dakota as a whole welcomed the President warmly as the special train made its way across the broad prairies, hesitating at the farm centers long enough to give the inhabitants a glimpse of the Chief Executive and his charming wife. The official welcome was staged at Pierre, the capital, where the President and Mrs. Coolidge were prevailed upon to change their program slightly, leaving the train and taking their place at the head of a parade which went through cheering crowds in the business section. Governor Bulow, Senator Norbeck, Representative Christopherson, committeemen, legislators, newspaper editors, farmers, and business men from all the central section were on hand to greet the President and escort him from town to town.

NEW YORK went completely daffy over Col. Charles Lindbergh when he flew there from Washington. The city gave him a reception never before equalled. As the young master of the air said, it was "the reception of Paris, Brussels, London and Washington rolled into one." Millions of the inhabitants of the metropolis stood in a line stretching from the Battery to Central park as the pretentious parade passed, madly cheering the hero and struggling for opportunity to see him. From all the buildings along the route paper confetti was hurled until it appeared as if the marchers were passing through a heavy snow storm. At the city hall Mayor Walker greeted the colonel as the son of one immigrant to the son of another, and pinned on his coat the city's gold medal of honor; the aviator talked briefly to the throng through the microphone; his mother was called to the front and introduced to the roaring crowd, and the procession resumed its march to Central park. At the Eternal Light at Madison square there was a pause while Lindbergh laid a wreath at the base of the memorial. At the Mall the colonel was met by Governor Smith who presented him with the state medal of valor.

Colonel Lindbergh spent most of the week in New York and was entertained extensively, though he found some time to rest. Early Thursday morning he unexpectedly flew down to Washington and returned to New York in a few hours with his transatlantic plane, and on Friday he flew in it for St. Louis, where another rousing welcome was accorded him lasting three days. Lindbergh says he hopes to visit many American cities in the "Spirit of St. Louis" for the purpose of boosting commercial aviation. To date he has signed only one contract—for a book describing his flight to Paris.

Chamberlain and Levine spent a jolly week in Germany waiting for their plane to be repaired. They visited various cities and were handsomely entertained. Commander Byrd had his Fokker monoplane America all ready at New York for a flight to Europe with Bert Acosta as his companion but was delayed by adverse weather conditions. Hope for the rescue of Nungesser and Coli sprang up when reports came that flares had been seen in the wilds of northern Quebec, but unhappily the stories were soon discredited. Commander de Pinedo, Italian "four continent flyer," completed his tour, returning from the Azores to Italy via Portugal and Spain.

Lieuts. F. B. McConnell and C. Anderson of the army were killed during air maneuvers at Langley field when their plane crashed and burned.

SOVIET RUSSIA'S rage over the murder of her ambassador to Poland, following the break with Great Britain, was enough to cause grave concern to European statesmen, and it was aggravated when the Polish court before which the assassin of Volkof was tried found the youth, Boris Kowode, guilty but sentenced him to life imprisonment instead of death and requested the President of Poland to commute the sentence to fifteen years. Kowode's lawyers turned the trial into one of bolshevism and its terrorist activities rather than one of the slayer. The Soviet rulers seem actually to be trying to intimidate the enemies of communism, for they are executing scores of men many of whom they accused of being spies in the pay of other governments, and then gloatingly announcing the executions to the world. They also decided to exile many thousands to Siberia. The Russian territorial army reserves, numbering some 300,000, usually called out for three weeks' practice, have been notified they are to stay in the service four months, and as most of them were being concentrated along the Polish frontier Poland was frankly alarmed. Members of the League of Nations council, which met in Geneva, considered taking formal collective action denouncing Russian communistic propaganda abroad, but abandoned the plan at the request of Poland.

THE league council discussed the prospects of the projected disarmament conference and decided the second reading of the preparatory plan should be held early in November. Only Herr Stresemann, German foreign minister, criticized the lack of progress.

"I regret the inability to advance a solution for the problem, and even if the second reading does not result in failure, a solution seems delayed to the distant future. The convenant of the league says all nations must reduce their armaments," insisted Herr Stresemann, voicing the German government's thesis that if the rest of the powers cannot agree to reduce their armament to the level imposed on Germany by the Versailles treaty, then Germany should be permitted to arm herself up to the same general standard as her European neighbors.

Germany notified the ambassadors' council that the forts on its eastern frontier had been demolished, as required, and demanded that the Rhineland occupational forces be reduced accordingly. France agreed to this provided Marshal Foch be permitted to examine the forts and found the German statement to be correct.

WHILE negotiations for a compromise between Chiang Kai-Shek, Chang Tso-lin and the governor of Shansi province were proceding, the Nanking Nationalist army continued its advance toward Peking and captured the important city of Haichow near the Shantung border. The southerners, according to reports, "committed robbery and outrage in wholesale fashion." Gen. Feng Yu-hsiang has pledged allegiance to the Hankow faction of the Nationalists and has been given command of its drive on Peking. Roger Green of the Rockefeller Foundation at Peking, accompanied by 29 physicians and nurses, has gone to Hankow to help in the care of some 12,000 wounded soldiers gathered in hospitals from the Honan battlefields. Antagonism against the Japanese is steadily increasing in southern China and it is still feared they are planning to reoccupy Shantung province in order to prevent the Nationalists from driving out Chang Tso-lin. Representatives of the Japanese communities in Manchuria have sent to Tokyo demands that the government prevent the civil war from entering Manchuria and Mongolia and that all Japanese investments and nationals there be protected.

IN THE recent elections in the Irish Free State the government secured 46 seats, a net loss of 7, in the Dail Eireann; Fianna Fail (De Valera's party), 44; the Sinn Fein, 5; Labor, 22; Farmers, 11; Independent, 14; National league, 8, and Independent Republicans, 2. President Cosgrave will have only seven fewer seats than at the dissolution. It is believed he will annex ten members from the farmers and independents and be stronger than before the election. Eamon De Valera says his 44 will refuse to take the oath of allegiance to the king. If they hold out, another election is probable.

WEDNESDAY was a busy day for Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury. He took in almost $400,000,000 in income and other tax payments, due on the completion of the second quarter of the calendar year. He took in about $89,000,000, paid by the debtor nations of Europe on American war loans. He sold $249,598,300 of new treasury 3¾ per cent bonds. Then he paid off maturing short term securities aggregating $378,000,000 and paid $70,000,000 in interest on various issues of the Liberty bonds.

The receipts went to swell the $600,000,000 surplus for the fical year expiring June 30, next, and the retirement of Liberty bonds and refinancing involved in the transactions means the reduction in the annual interest on the public debt many millions of dollars.

Great Britain turned in $67,575,000, which was its ninth semi-annual payment of interest. France paid $10,000,000 "on account," Italy paid $5,000,000, and smaller payments were made by the other debtor nations.

NOBLES of the Mystic Shrine gathered in great numbers at Atlantic City for their annual meeting, and 100,000 wearers of the fez took part in a mammoth night parade along the five-mile Boardwalk that was said to be the finest procession ever seen in the resort city. Clarence M. Dunbar of Palestine temple, Providence, R. I., was elevated to the office of imperial potentate to succeed David M. Crossland.

THIRTY-EIGHT of the 203 cadets graduated from the West Point Military academy last week have requested service with the air corps, the War department has announced. Under a department interpretation of the air corps act, commissions cannot be granted in time of peace to any person not a qualified flyer and the 38 cadets, therefore, will undergo training before receiving the second lieutenant commissions bestowed upon them at graduation.

Organization Urged as Farmers' Great Need

Thorough organization to help an agricultural situation in which a meager crop may be worth more than a bumper one was urged by former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois. Speaking at the annual meeting of the Dairymen's League Co-operative Association, Inc., he advocated the growth of farmers' co-operative organizations to a point where they are nationwide and federated. He also voiced his faith in the proposed federal farm board.

Deploring the perplexity in which the farmer finds himself when a rich crop brings him less returns than a poor one, Mr. Lowden cited the 1924 corn crop. It was worth about $750,000,000 more than that of 1923, although about 20 per cent smaller, he explained.

"If the corn growers had been organized and found that the market would not receive their corn at what it cost to produce it," he continued, "they would not have dumped the larger part of the crop upon the market in a few brief months."

Despite agricultural figures which "the financial writers gloat" over, under the present system "a surplus, no matter how slight, seems to have the effect of depressing the price with a total disregard of the cost of production of even the absolute necessities of life," he declared.

Collective marketing is "progressing," he said, and predicted it would some day "cover the entire field."

WHITE AND BLACK MADE CHIC; FLOWERS ADORN DANCE FROCK

THOSE who consider startling black-and-white impossible from the standpoint of becomingness will find that white touched with black is not only more flattering, but it is the very quintessence of chic for summer wear.

Often the white-with-a-touch-of-black effect is achieved not in the fabric, but rather through the accessories which complement the costume. That is, with an all-white gown of crepe or satin, the shoes will be white piped with black, likewise the belt the gloves and the purse will be of white kidskin handsomely detailed with black. If one follows the latest French vogue the hand bag is sure to be of black velvet. The shoulder flower may be black or black-and-white, or it may indulge in a touch of color. The hat carrying out the idea of white predominating will likely be one of the very new broad-of-brim white felts with simply a black ribbon velvet band, or what is quite the latest, a white felt with insets of black lace.

Embroidery done in black on white may be so discreetly carried out that while it works miracles in achieving chic, a dainty summery appearance will not be forfeited. The pretty afternoon frock in the picture emphasizes the effectiveness of black embroidered on white. The original model is of heavy white crepe, but the style could be successfully copied in white shantung, white linen or white jersey, or that which is the reigning favorite for sports wear, white crepe satin, the sort that launders.

There is a decided preference for sheer white fabrics this year, delicately printed with black. Especially is georgette print of this character in demand.

Now, don't be throwing bouquets," but fashion has been, is now doing, and will continue to do that very thing. The vogue for wearing flowers shows no abatement. During the winter, the mode's aim was very sure, most of the flowers finding placement on the shoulder of milady's frock, if not on the lapel of her coat.

With the coming of summer Dame Fashion grows less arbitrary, posing her posies as prettily and promiscuously as she pleases. Especially are the new dance frocks cunningly flower-bedecked. There's often a cluster of flowers on the bouffant skirt matching the shoulder bouquet. Then, again, maybe the flowers are ingeniously worked into a ribbon-embroidered basket effect, or perhaps they will peek here and there from under the lace flounces of her bouffant skirt.

Bouquets of faintly pink-tinged apple blossoms add loveliness from neckline to hemline of the girlish dance frock in the picture. The dress, which is of white georgette, is delightfully simple. In regard to white georgette, this fabric is wonderfully popular for party frocks. According to Paris reports, either all-white or all-black remains favorite for evening wear.

As every one will agree, nothing in the way of a gown for wear on a moonlit summer evening could be more enchanting than this lovely frock of white georgette which Eleanor Boardman of screen-star fame is wearing in this picture. Its semi-fitted bodice and gracefully undulating skirt are a mode recently acclaimed.

The vogue for the all-white evening gown finds expression also through the medium of white satin. White tulle made as bouffant as the designer can accomplish is also a favored jeune fille mode.

Beautiful Dance Frock.

Bows Flutter on New Frocks

Fluttering bows and a new square neckline distinguish the frocks of spring and show a tendency toward more feminine fashions.

Faces on Shoe Heels

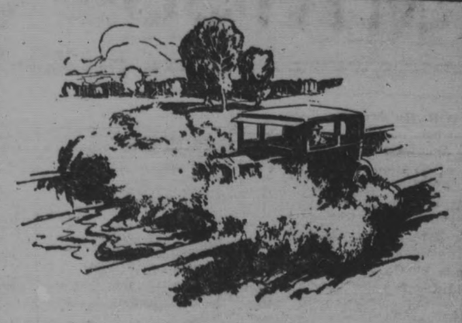
Strange things happen in the fashion world of the royal borough of Kensington. Latest of these is the new heel mode of the evening shoe. It is a painted face of a woman with striking headdress, executed in emeralds and brilliants and which tones with the decoration of the slipper and evening gown.

For Sports Wear

A sleeveless jacket of leather in green, red or blue is shown among the new models for sports. It is smart as well as practical.

Charming Lingerie

Charming new lingerie is of the finest glove silk trimmed with point d' esprit and delicate applique in color.



A BATH TUB
that tests automobiles

S-P-L-A-S-H through the bath tub goes the General Motors car. Out onto the slippery road it dashes. On go the brakes!

What is the reason for such torture of an innocent automobile?

The answer is that the engineers at the General Motors Proving Ground take nothing for granted. They want to know what happens when a car ploughs through water. They insist too on measuring, with special machines which they have built, just how quickly the car can be stopped and just how much pressure of the foot is required to stop it.

Altogether General Motors has 136 different tests by which cars are proved as they never have been proved before; nothing is left in doubt. All of which means that you are buying doubly assured safety, reliability and comfort when you choose a General Motors car.

MENLO PARK

New Buildings Will Be Accepted.

The new buildings at the base hospital will be accepted by the government in about two weeks when the staff of the executive office will be increased. The new entrance on Willow road is started and will be completed shortly. It is believed another appropriation is to be made by Congress to erect more buildings for new departments to be established at the hospital.

New Building Being Erected.

Mr. Longo of San Francisco is erecting a building at Atherton which will be used when finished as a modern meat market and grocery store. It adjoins the Cafe de Paris, close to the Coryell estate. This institution will supply the needs of the people of the growing and progressive City of Atherton.

Discontinuing Welfare Activities.

A. F. Ward, for some years in charge of the Knights of Columbus activities of the Veterans' hospital in Menlo Park will retire on tomorrow when the activities will cease The Knights of Columbus are discontinuing their welfare activities in all veteran hospitals. Mr. Ward will remain in Menlo Park for an indefinite time. He will leave in a short time for a vacation to be spent in the Yosemite and Tahoe regions. Mr. Ward formerly lived in Seattle. He is held in high esteem everywhere. The residents of the hospital are loath to lose him.

Rents F. O. Rogers' Home.

A. Blanco, who will take over the New Menlo Theatre tomorrow on a ten-year lease, has rented the F. O. Rogers' home on Menlo avenue. He has moved from Hollywood and is accompanied by his father, mother and sister, who will live with him. Rogers and family will remove to their former home in Seattle, Washington. Rogers is the local assistant scoutmaster.

Pastors Retreat at St. Patrick's.

The pastors of the San Francisco diocese are having a retreat at St. Patrick's Seminary. For the past two years the annual retreat of the pastors was at St. Joseph's college at Los Altos. Hereafter the meeting of the priests will be at St. Patricks. Many former pastors of the Church of the Nativity are attending and they have visited their friends here. Next week the retreat for the assistant pastors will be held.

The Williams place in Menlo Oaks has been leased by Mr. Plummer of San Francisco. The Williams estate is one of the show places of that locality.

Christened at Menlo Park.

The Church of the Nativity in Menlo Park was the scene, Sunday, of the christening of the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Eyre. The baby was named Edward Engle Eyre, Jr. His aunt, Mlle Edmee de Lencios of Paris was made godmother, Mrs. Joseph A. Donohoe, Jr., acting for her. J. A. Donohue and Atherton Eyre were the godfathers

After the christening, Mr. and Mrs. Eyre gave an informal reception at their home for relatives and close friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Eyre are occupying the General Devol home on Santa Cruz avenue for the summer and until their new home at Atherton is completed.

To Visit Honolulu.

Miss Marcella O'Keefe and her sister, Miss Ethel O'Keefe, departed on Wednesday for a trip to Honolulu and will be absent for three weeks. During their stay on the islands they will visit all points of interest there.

Lot Sells for $400 at Tax Sale.

A lot in Stanford Park was sold for $400 at the delinquent tax sale at the coorthouse last Tuesday. The amount of taxes due was $4.0 and this amount was bid up by anxious buyers to $400. It was finally knocked down to Thomas Callan, the Colma capitalist. This shows how property values in Stanford Park are soaring. People are anxious to secure holdings in that favored locality.

New Menlo Theatre Program.

The following is the program for the coming week in the New Menlo Theatre under the new management: Friday evening, Rin Tin Tin in "Tracked by the Police." Saturday evening, Jackie Coogan in "Johnny Get Your Hair Cut"; comedy, "Ask Dad." Sunday, John Gilbert in "Flesh and the Devil." Sunday, "Tillie the Toiler." Tuesday evening, Dolores Costello in "A Million Bid." Wednesday and Thursday, Monte Blue in "The Black Diamond Express Love Makes 'Em Wild"; comedy, "Deer Season."

Sells Home in Atherton.

James Raney, the night watchman for Menlo Park, has disposed of his home in Atherton to a local capitalist. Mr. Raney will seek the seaside for a dip in the deep and after several ablutions will doll up for a short vacation before going to Willets to engage in farming, his former occupation.

Will Deliver Address in Oakland.

Senator S. M. Shortridge will deliver the address at the Fourth of July celebration in Oakland next Monday. He is one of the foremost orators of the country and no doubt his speech next Monday will be one of his best efforts. His first Fourth of July address was at Redwood City in 1888. The Times-Gazette secured the masterpiece and printed it in full, preserving it in the files of the paper. Ever since then all budding orators in the county never fail to call at the office of the paper to peruse the speech to get their inspiration from it.

Sells Stein Home.

Lambert & Walter, Redwood City realty brokers, this week sold the attractive Stein home on Polhemus avenue and Randol street to Mrs. Catherine Sudden Blair, a wealthy Sn Francisco lady. It is said the price was $50,000. The new owner is to improve the holding. Thus one by one the big Atherton estates are falling into the hands of San Francisco buyers.

Miss Alberta Choate, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Choate, of this city, graduated with honors from the Teachers' College of San Jose during the week. She received her diploma from the domestic science department of the school and is ready to teach.

Duncan Matheson, Captain of Detectives of San Francisco, will address the members of Redwood City Lodge No. 168, F. & A. M., next Thursday evening. Captain Matheson has been the speaker at meetings here on several occasions, and his talks are always enjoyed.

Polo Game Next Sunday.

The San Mateo-Burlingame club will hold a polo game on Sunday next at the Menlo Circus club at 3 p. m. Admission one dollar. General public invited. Theer will be a polo game and horse racing on the grounds on July Fourth.

REDWOOD GOLFERS TO MEET SAN FRANCISCANS

San Francisco and Redwood golfers will meet at the Emerald Lake Country club golf course on July 4th at the annual bi-city competition.

Three events have been planned by the committee in charge of which Guy R. Farwell of Emerald Lake is the chairman. The first event will be the handicap between the San Francisco golfers and the Redwood City golfers, each team to be decided by an elimination route. Entries for this event are signing up with Leon Solache at 222 Kearny street.

The second event will be the San Francisco and Redwood City ladies' tourney which is under the direction of a committee headed by Mrs. Fred Chilcottee of Redwood City and Mrs. George L. Leonard of San Francisco.

The third event of July 4th will be the novices mixed tournament which promises to be the most entertaining feature of the Independence Day program. The committee in charge of the tournament consists of Sam Whiting, Charles Holt, Mrs. Walter Kellogg, Mrs. Russ Wolden, Mrs. C. H. Holt, Cy Young, Henry Beeger, Edward Hoagland, Leon Solache, Bob Fiest, A. C. Argo, C. H. Doxsee, Bert Fiest, Dr. B. C. Kingsbury, George Munro, Dan Stafford and Joseph Leonard.

Cups were donated by Sterling Furniture Company, Dr. J. M. Toner and Leonard and Holt.

DOUBLE SHOOTING FOLLOWS ARGUMENT ON COLMA RANCH

Two men were shot as the result of an argument on a ranch at Colma Tuesday night. The dead men are Colombo Ghiocci and Joseph Bono, who quarrelled during dinner at the Ray Chresta ranch. In the course of the argument Bono is said to have picked up a shotgun and shot both barrels into Ghiocci's head at short range.

Bono then sought to escape but was attacked by Nicholas Delfino, foreman of the ranch. Delfino endeavored to wrest the gun from Bono. After a fight of several minutes in which it is stated Bono sought to shoot his antagonist, Delfino managed to point the weapon at Bono and pull the trigger Bono was killed instantly.

Delfino was taken into custody by Constable S. A. Landini and Sheriff T. C. McGovern and was held pending an examination. District Attorney Swart stated yesterday, however, that he did not believe any charges would be brought against the prisoner, as he appeared from all facts that he could learn that the shooting was justifiable homocide. The examination was held in South San Francisco yesterday.

TRAFFIC OFFICER INJURED IN MOTORCYCLE CRASH

Elgin Kreiss, a member of the state traffic squad in this county, met with painful injuries Sunday evening when his motorcycle was wrecked in a crash with an automobile on the highway at Atherton. Kreiss was traveling at a high rate of speed to an accident reported from Atherton. Near the old Middlefield road a car ahead of him turned from the highway and onto the side road. Kreiss was unable to miss the turning car and crashed headlong into the machine.

In the wreck the traffic officer received injuries which later examination has shown to be three fractures of the right leg beside minor cuts and scratches. He is being attended by Dr. H. Clattenburg.

Kreiss and his brother, Chester Kreiss, also a traffic officer, narrowly missed being killed not far from the scene of this accident last year when their car was wrecked in a crash with another machine.

Annual Tax Sale Held on Tuesday

The annual tax sale of delinquent property of the county took place last Tuesday. A large crowd was present to bid on the many parcels that were offered. The sale was the most successful ever taking place in the history of the County Tax Collector's office, every piece of property being disposed of, and in several instances for fair prices. The bidding was lively and spirited, all present desiring to secure a parcel of land on the peninsula. Tax Collector McSweeney opened the sale with a few brief remarks. He proved himself to be a clever auctioneer, securing for the county a large sum of money. Two hundred and sixty-five pieces of property were offered for sale. Every parcel was sold, which shows what demand for property there is in the county. The tidy sum of $5945.08 was the result of the sale. Twenty-five acres of tide land in Visitacion Valley brought $500, this being the largest sum received for any single parcel. The largest purchasers were Thomas Callan of Colma and the Occidental Realty Company of San Francisco. Land in Dumbarton and North Fair Oaks brought stiff prices that in other days could be secured for the taxes, but property in San Mateo county is becoming more valuable and everyone wants to get hold of some of it. Some years ago only a small portion of delinquent lands could be sold, and it reverted to the state, which now holds title to it.

A. McSweeney and Wife Leave for Vacation

A. McSweeney, the popular San Mateo County Tax Collector, accompanied by his wife, will depart today for a three weeks' vacation to be spent in travel. They will motor to Reno to spend some time at the state exhibition there. From that place they will motor to the Yellowston e Park, Salt Lake City and other points of interest in the Northwest, returning to California by way of Oregon. Mr. McSweeney is a hard-worker, giving all his time to the duties of his office. He has richly earned his vacation. The duties and responsibilities of the tax collector's office are varied and are increasing every year.

During his absence Miss Lorraine Dickey will be in charge of the office. She is a clever and talented young woman.
